OUR OTTWA LETTER.

THE MANIFESTO OF THE LIBERAL PARTY FORMALLY ANNOUNCED.

Great Oration by Sir Richard Cartwright —The Trade Question and How it Affects Canada—An Able Review of the Situation, &c., &c.

[From Our Own Correspondent.]

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 21.—The manifesto of the Liberal party on which they intend to stand or fall at the next general election has been issued in the shape of a speech delivered last evening at Pembroke, Ont., by Sir Richard Cartwright. Wired the TIMES a brief synopsis of his remarks at the time. While Mr. Laurier, the leader of the party, has already spoken in Quebec, and has not yet closed the series of speeches he intends delivering, and while his utterance gave no uncertain sound on the momentous question which is now agitating the public mind, still on trade matters and finance Sir Richard Cartwright has no equal on this continent. The bold and independent manner in which he arrays his facts, regardless of the political significance for the mere moment, providing he knows them to be right and in the interests of the country, has won for him the approbation of all right thinking men. His enemies, whose disapprobation he glories in, have from time to time made him the object of their most bitter attacks. He has been accused of insulting the numerous delegations that waited on him in respect to trade affairs during the time that he was finance minister. There is a good deal of truth in this charge. Indeed, Sir Richard in his speech last evening bore testimony to the fact. "When I was," he said, "finance Minister," I was approached by all kinds of monopolists who tendered me their support on the condition that I should arrange the tariff so as to enable them to fleece and rob the people, and when I told them to go to the parent of evil, they went to Sir John Macdonald. (Cheers and laughter).

NO TIME FOR EXTRANEOUS MATTER.

At the outset of his remarks Sir Richard pointed out that it was not his intention to criticize the conduct and policy of the Dominion Government, since he believed more good could be effected, and better service done the country, by devoting his whole time to that measure which was now agitating all the people of Canada, and to point out what the policy of each of the political parties in this country was upon the great issue. Speaking for the Liberal party, their policy was as clear as noonday, and no one could mistake it. They demanded free and unrestricted commercial intercouse with the United States, and as a means to obtaining that end they would ask, and receive, the right for Canada to negotiate her own commercial treaties. Everybody, said the ex-finance minister, would see that this was a direct step towards national manhood. Mr. Laurier, he added, explained that point in his speech at Abbotsford, and there was no wavering on the part of any Liberal, or no dissension in the Liberal ranks on that question. Pointing out these salient points, which were to be the main planks in the Liberal platform, and upon which he and those associated with him were prepared to stand or fall, he then directed the attention of the vast assemblage to the on the same question. He has read the articles in their subsidized newspapers, and had heard the speeches of the ministers of the crown, but he defied any man to say what was their policy on this important matter. Take, for instance, said Sir Richard, in that biting tone of sarcasm which he is a complete master of, in regard to the standing offer of reciprocity in natural products, and they had done on a Monday what they had asserted on Thursday, it would be treason to do. The President of the Council, Mr. Colby, speaking for the government last session, declared that the greatest evil that could happen Canadian farmers would be reciprocity in natural products, while in another section of Canada, the Maritime Provinces, some of the ministers were speaking in favor of reciprocity. So it was that while in one province the ministers were pretending they favored reciprocity, in another they denounced as traitors and annexationists all who favored better trade relations with the United States. The same vacilating and lack of policy was exemplified in the Government's action in respect to the removal of the export duty on logs. Time and again its removal was objected to on the grounds that it benefitted the Canadian sawmills, and for which purpose it was imposed, yet at the dictation of Mr. McKinley it was abolished. In 1878 the National Policy was adopted, according to the Premier, with a view of taxing American goods so as to obtain reciprocity, but this promise was cast aside in the interests of the combinesters.

THE FOSTER TARIFF.

Sir Richard Cartwright showed that when the McKinley bill was before the United States authorities the Government of Canada aided its passage through Congress by the adoption of the Foster tariff, which increased the duties on American products. The Government promised a home market for all our products, and pooh-poohed the McKinley bill. As to the home market he believed in it as much as any body, but he preferred the United States markets to those of three thousand miles away. It was useless to expect a renewal of the old arrangement, providing for reciprocity in natural products, but leading statesmen in the United States had assured them that if Canada was sincerely desirous of full and complete reciprocity they were ready to treat with us upon such a basis. A clear offer of reciprocity from the United States was just the one thing that the Government dreaded most of all.

PARTY LINES.

Whatever may be said in the past of the Liberals having no policy, certainly it cannot be true in this instance. If there be a lack of policy on the side of either party, it is on the Government, but there are some so blind that will not see. SLABTOWN.

BEHRING SEA FISHING.

Plan Formulated by the British Minister to Settle the Sealing Question.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British Minister, has prepared a plan for the temporary settlement of the Behring sea controversy, and providing for a convention of experts to devise means for a permanent settlement.

Sir Julian will present the measures he has devised to his government for approval.

Provision is make for a convention between Great Britain, Russia and the United States of America in relation to the fur fisheries in Behring sea, the sea of Okhotsh and adjoining waters.

The articles of agreement provide that the high contracting parties shall agree to appoint a mixed commission of experts, who shall inquire into the subject and report within two years of the date of the convention on the propriety and the advisability of regulations looking to the preservation of the seals.

After this report has been submitted, a further convention is to be held in case the high contracting parties are unable to agree upon regulations, if any are necessary.

The questions of difference shall be referred to the arbitration of an impartial government, whose award shall be final.

Pending the report of the commission and four months after the date of such report, a temporary measure shall be put in effect, making the following provisions:

A line of demarkation to be called the "seal fishery line" shall be drawn as follows: From Point Arrival, at the southern extremity of the island of Saghalien, in the sea of Okhotsk, to the point of intersection of the fiftieth parallel of north lattitude with the one hundred and sixtieth meridian of longitude east from Greenwich, thence eastward along the fiftieth parallel to the point of intersection with the one hundred and sixtieth meridian west from Greenwich.

The subjects of the high contracting parties shall be prohibited from engaging in the fur seal fisheries, and in the taking of seals north of the seal fishery line from the 1st of May to the 30th of June, also from the 1st of October to the 30th of December.

During the intervening periods sealing vessels belonging to the high contracting parties shall not be permitted to approach these islands within a radius of 10 miles.

Every vessel found engaged in seal fishing contrary to the prohibitions shall be forfeited, and the master and crew of the vessel subject to fine and imprisonment, the nation to which such vessel belongs alone having jurisdiction over such cases.

A BIG SYNDICATE.

New York Capitalists are to Invest in Port Angeles Real Estate.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—A syndicate of New York capitalists has been formed during the past two weeks to operate in real estate and improvements at Port Angeles, Washington, on the Straits of Fuca. The capital subscribed is $500,000, but may be increased to $1,000,000 by the accession of Boston capitalists. The parties are acting on information that the Northern Pacific will extend its lines by a branch to Port Angeles, and that the naval commission lately on the Pacific coast was favorably impressed with the place as a possible location of the new navy yard.

THE CAPITAL.

A Government Official Who is Looking for Glory.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 30.—Dr. Bell, of the geological survey, arrived home today from Sudbury, where he was finishing a topographical and geological map, on which he has been engaged for the past three years. He desired to stay there, so as to be able to point out places of interest to iron and steel men, who are there to day, but his chief, Dr. Selwyn, ordered him to leave before they came, so that the latter would have any glory which might arise therefrom.

Improving Rapidly.

Pa has dyspepsia, malaria and gout.
So chapped are his hands they are all broken out.
He is prone to rheumatics that make his legs swell.
But in other respects he is doing quite well.
When his rheumatics are better if he will call at cochrane and munns and purchase some of the famous Pearl Toilet Cream he can effectually cure the chapped hands, and then he will only have dyspepsia, malaria and gout to wrestle with.

Fast Time.

The Union Pacific vestibuled train leaving Portland at 7.00 a.m., has Pullman sleeping and dining cars. Free Pullman tourist cars, and free reclining chair cars to Omaha, Kansas City and Chicago, without change. Steamers leave Victoria daily (except Sunday.) For tickets to any point east, north and south, call on or address Morris J. Bissell, 100 Government St., Victoria, B. C.

The Deadliest of Serpents.

The cobra destroys less life in the aggregate than the various forms of cholera, cholera morbus, cholera infantum, diarrhœa, dysentry, cramps, colic, etc. Mortality in Canada, from these causes is light, owing to the general use of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, which is an unfailing specific for all bowel complaints.

TO-DAY'S DISPATCHES.

WITNESSES IN THE TIPPERARY CASE REFUSE TO SPEAK.

The San Francisco Whaling Fleet Returning Home—German Lottery Tickets Being Brought Over as Freight—America's Representative on a Holiday.

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—The Hamburg Nachrichter reports that Prince Bismarck will support Finance Minister Miquels in his new taxation scheme.

Refused to Work.

CORK, Oct. 30.—The sailors employed on the steamship Bandbar declined to work yesterday if the consignment of cattle belonging to owners who are boycotted were carried on the steamer. The men held out in their determination and rather than provoke an open conflict the steamship company forward to their destination by rail themselves, paying the freight charges. Notwithstanding this action the defence union will sue the steamship company for refusing to ship cattle on their steamer yesterday.

Colonists and Immigrants.

VIENNA, Oct. 30.—The Polish members of the Reichtag are organizing an expedition to enquire into the condition of Polish colonists in Brazil. The Courier of Warsaw declares that emigration to Brazil being forbidden by the German Government accounts for the prevalance of fever in that republic. The North German Lloyd Company gives out that emigrants going to North America charge emigrant agents with cruelty.

Quiet Restored.

BERNE, Oct. 30.—Quiet has been restored at Frebaurg the capital of the Canton of the same name, the scene yesterday of conflicts between Radicals and Conservatives, growing out of the Canton elections held last Sunday.

Would Not Answer.

TIPPERARY, Oct. 30.—Among the witnesses called to-day to give evidence for the prosecution at the conspiracy case were Simon Gleeson and Alice Sadler. Upon being questioned by the counsel for the crown each of the witnesses refused to answer. The court directed them to answer the questions, but they still persisted in their refusal. The magistrate thereupon committed them to jail until Friday.

700 Lives Lost.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The reported finding of a vessel somewhere near Saint Vincent, off the southern coast of Portugal, has created a great deal of excitement in this city as it is said that there were 700 emigrants on board and that not one was saved. No confirmation has yet been received.

Leave of Absence.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—Robert Lincoln, United States minister, left London today for Liverpool where he will embark for New York, having been granted a leave of absence by his government. He will return to England in January.

The Crank in N. Y.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—George Francis Train arrived here last night after a 112 hour journey from Tacoma. It was learned that he had abandoned the attempt to circle the globe in 62 days because of his inability to make the necessary connection at Hongkong for San Francisco.

Another Jack the Ripper.

HELSINGFORS, Oct. 30.—For some time past a series of atrocities similar to those committed by "Jack the Ripper," has startled society here. Several women belonging to the class of unfortunates have been found dead in their beds having been killed by being strangled. The police were for a long time unable to obtain the least clue to the murderer, but a man has at last been found. His name is Haapaoja and he has been known to the police for many years as a scoundrel of the very lowest class.

War Correspondents to Receive O'Brien.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—War correspondents who occompanied William O'Brien on his Canadian trip three years ago, had a conference to-day and arranged to have a little family reunion with the Irish agitator, after his arrival on Sunday next. The Canadian excursion was a pretty lively one; rocks and bludgeons figured in it largely, and there has since then been a brotherly feeling and correspondence between O'Brien and the newspaper men who accompanied him on his Canadian tour. They will take dinner together soon after his arrival. The joint committee from local Irish organizations has arranged for a reception to O'Brien and Dillon. Early on Sunday morning steamers will start down the bay to await the arrival of the steamer Lahn ampagne. On November the tenth a big reception will take place at the Metropolitan Opera House.

German Lottery Tickets.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30—There is a large demand in this country for German lottery tickets, and with the American lotteries crippled by the recent legislation, German companies have a prospect of an increased business. In order to get around the law excluding lottery tickets from the mails, German agents have tried to bring over lottery tickets as baggage. A. Jarambouky, a passenger on the steamship Lahn, on her last trip, declared to the custom house authorities that he had four large packages of German lottery tickets. Jarambouky is supposed to be the general distributing agent for this country. Special deputy Naval Officer Gourley refused to pass the tickets on the ground that they were immoral and therefore prohibited under section 11 of the customs laws of 1890. Naval Officer Willis sustained this decision. About twenty agents for the German lottery tickets made application for tickets that had been seized. C. B. Richards represented them, and the matter has been referred to the treasury department. Richards says that he is in no way interested in the tickets and is simply acting for the agents and custom house broker. He went to Washington to-day to present their case. Lottery men say they have assurances from Washington that the tickets will be released. They are not worrying very much, the decision should be delayed until after the drawing, and surrender the present lot of tickets valueless.

Cowhided her Rival.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 30.—Mrs. Sophie Richter, a comely South Baltimore dame, recently discovered that her husband was devoting too much of his time to Miss Mary Mooney. Miss Mooney and Mr. Richter were enjoying themselves at a ball last night, when Mrs. Richter appeared and without warning drew a whip from the covering of her dress and cowhided her rival. When the victim escaped the wronged wife walked out of the hall unmolested. She had broken up the ball. To-day came the sequel in the shape of a warrant for Mrs. Richter's arrest. At the hearing she acknowledged the assault, and says Miss Money had alienated her husband's affections. She waived examination.

Telegraphers to Strike on Tuesday.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—A "tip" is given out to-night that the Western Union telegraph operators will strike on Tuesday next, election day. They hope to get in concessions by going out on a day when it will be impossible for the company to find any one to do the necessary work. On the other hand, the Western Union officials say they don't fear a strike at any time, and profess to believe that the spirit of the strikers is thoroughly broken.

Retracted an Insult.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Oct. 30.—Congressman Wade and Judge Ryan met in joint discussion this evening. During Wade's speech he called Ryan a liar, whereupon the latter started for him with blood in his eye. Wade quickly retracted the charges. The affair caused great excitement.

News from the Whalers.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 30. — The whaler Seabreeze has arrived from the Arctic with 500 barrels of oil and 9000 pounds of whalebone. James McKenna, owner of the Meyer and other whalers, were passengers on the vessel. He says that the report of the wreck of the Silver Wave has not been verified. The vessel left Point Barrow for Wainwright inlet and put up for the winter. The Hunter was to follow and return with the crew. The Hunter has not returned and hence no definite reports have been received from the Silver Wave. If the whaler was lost the crew would have had no trouble in making their way overland to Point Barrow station.

A Revolution Threatened.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—From present indications a South American revolution is promised. Private advices received in this city to-day state that Guzman Blaco, Ex-President of Venzuela, is in Antwerp, buying arms with which to equip his followers for an invasion of his native country. Senor Blaco has been living in Europe for a number of years, in fact ever since it was developed by his defeat for reelection to the presidency that his power in Venzuela was at an end. An open rupture between him and the present Venzuelan Government never before occurred, but it was tacitly understood that he could not with safety return to the scene of his former triumphs. Now, according to Senor Don Calosperez, who arrived from Venzuela on Tuesday night, this secret misunderstanding has been made public through an open letter published by President Palacio.

CHAPTER VI.

ANOTHER BRIDE.

Mr. Gryce had observed that he was getting old. He never felt older than he did that night when after the discovery of the mistake he had made, he turned humiliated from the presence of Mrs. Gretorex and the man whom he had caused to suffer such a succession of serious and wholly unnecessary affronts.

He was unused to making mistakes. He [illegible] of his premises, that he could look back upon few cases where his conclusions had been ridiculous.

"It is a new sensation," he muttered, as he passed down the elegant staircase on his own way out. "Well, I have heard some men say they would give a good deal to experience one. But as for me, give me the old ones; they are certainly more satisfactory." And with a bitter smile he prepared to thread his way through the brilliant throng.

But before he had worked his way half through he paused to get a good view of the scene, without attracting too much attention to himself. "Since I am at a swell wedding I might as well see the bride. If she looks more like her photograph than the other girl does, well and good; I am an old fool and it is about time for me to take down my sign and shut up shop. But if on the contrary, she looks less like it; if her expression varies or she is fairer or larger than one would suppose from the picture they gave me, then I can lay the fault on the photographer and regain some portion at least of my self-esteem." And unmindful of the curious glances which now and then found him out, he retained his place through the weary minutes of waiting that now ensued.

At length, with a sigh of relief that ran through the length of those vast parlors, the strains of the Wedding March were heard, and Mr. Gryce, saw the bride and groom, who, contrary to the usual arrangement, descended together. They passed near, very near that great hall clock, so near that the bride's veil brushed the homely habiliments of the man who stood there; but she did not notice this nor to all appearance did he, for his eyes never left the clock though a careful observer might have perceived that his lips pressed a little closer together after she went by, and that he did not wait for her to pass over the threshold of the parlor door before taking his departure.

But no one thought of him. All eyes were on the bride, and little did any one think, least of all she whom it most concerned, that the faint, self-suppressed click which they had just heard denoted the withdrawal of one whose powers of observation were more to be dreaded than were those of the whole vast crowd he had left behind him. If she had—but our interest is not at present with the bride, pale and troubled as she is, but with this man who but a short time ago entered the house with feelings of almost beneficent concern for its inmates, only to leave it now, with a sore and humiliated heart.

For in the one glimpse he caught of the bride—and he saw her, though he did not appear to do so—he had discerned nothing to relieve his dissatisfaction with himself. If the other girl was like the picture, this pale, haughty, self-contained woman was the picture itself. There was no mistaking this, much as his pride would have been gratified to have found it otherwise. Details that were lacking in the other girl's countenance were here, and an expression which made him acknowledge to himself that he would henceforth trust no man's eyes, not even his own, in this delicate matter of identification, the least shade of a look making sometimes all the difference between one person and another. He went out of the house feeling, as I have said, very old, and he even was conscious of a twinge or two of rheumatism as he stepped down the icy steps and prepared to take his way round the house to the street. For this reason, perhaps, and also because the walk was more or less slippery, he went very slowly, so that he was just at the corner of the house when the startling scream was heard, which as we know, so seriously disturbed the minds of those who were witnessing the ceremony. A muffled cry it was, and to those outside sounded as if it came from the upper story of the house. But when the detective paused and looked up at the windows overhead he saw nothing, and being in a very different mood went on his way, remembering the occurrence only by a sort of lugubrious echo to the rather melancholy thoughts which he had been at that moment indulging.

His course was toward the city. He took it direct, getting on the elevated train at 125th street and getting off again at twenty-third. Why twenty-third? Was it not late enough for him to go home? He evidently did not think so. Without hesitation and with a certain determination of manner, he went immediately to the C—— Hotel.

Let us follow him.

"Well, I suppose the wedding has come off?"

These were his words to the clerk who was still at his desk in the office.

The clerk looked at him and laughed.

"No," was his quick rejoinder, "It didn't. The bride absconded."

"What is that?"

"Mr. Gryce's tone was quite sharp. His face resumed its old expression.

"She ran off; didn't wait for the clergyman; afraid to risk herself with such a glum-looking customer as Molesworth I suppose. I can't say I blame her."

"Humph! You interest me. And at what hour was this; how soon after we left?"

"In a few minutes I should say; for you had not been gone more than half an hour when the expectant bridegroom came with the Rev. Mr. Peace at his heels, and she was not here then nor had been for some little time."

Who saw her go out?"

"The hall boy."

"No one else?"

"I think not."

"Didn't she leave any word behind her?"

"Yes, a note; it was lying on the table in her room. Molesworth got it."

"The door then was open?"

"It was unlocked."

"Curious. There seems to be some difficulty in the way of wedlock to-night. I have just come from a wedding, and the bride was three-quarters or more of an hour late. But Molesworth, as you call him—how did he take it?"

"That's hard telling; he looked grim enough, but then he was none too cheerful-looking before. Anything but a bridegroom in appearance at any time. But then, it was rather hard lines for him. 'Twould make any man angry; Mr. Peace on hand and no bride? I declare, I feel cheap myself; and the chambermaid I believe shed tears, grieving over the loss of the good fee she expected, I suppose."

"Yes, it's quite thrilling, quite romantic," quoth Mr. Gryce, enthusiastically. Then in quieter tones, remarked, "You were all in the room, then?"

"No, I didn't know anything about it till Dr. Molesworth came down, and giving me the price of the room, remarked that there would be no wedding at present, the young lady having preferred to wait till she could have her friends about her."

"Ah!" ejaculated Mr. Gryce.

"Neat, wasn't it?" remarked the clerk. "But he is no fool; and though I knew on the spot that she had run away for good, I couldn't help giving him credit for coolness. But it was all in his words, his look was terrible."

Mr. Gryce's eyes fixed themselves on the small lamp used to light cigars.

"[illegible] said he.

"But he wasn't tragic, not a bit of it." [illegible] took out the note he had evidently received from the girl, and burned it in the flame of that jet."

"Oh! he burned it, did he?"

"Down to the very end."

"And then went away?"

"Directly."

"Well, this has been a delightful evening!" commented Mr. Gryce; and he lounged away a few more minutes in the office, then went out and entering a drug-store near by, searched for an address in the directory.

"I cannot sleep, why then not amuse myself," his look seemed to say, as glancing up at the clock, he passed again into the street and betook himself westward.

Certainly one does not run against such a complication every day, and when one is a detective, why not enjoy now and then the advantages of his position.

Mr. Gryce went up the steps of a four-story brick building to which was attached a doctor's sign.

A middle-aged woman, of neat enough appearance, answered his ring, after a short delay.

"Is the doctor in?" he asked.

She shook her head, and glancing at a slate that hung on one of the pegs of the old fashioned hallrack, declared:

"He won't be home before to-morrow."

"And I am so ill," murmured the detective, with an air of great weakness. He had read her character at a glance.

"You?" she exclaimed.

"I have come so far," he went on. "I thought surely I should see him to-night, if I came late enough. I know he is going to be married soon but —"

"Married!" The interruption was full of surprise and incredulity. "Married! Dr. Molesworth! I guess you are mistaken."

"O, no," the old gentleman persisted, assuming with every instant a look of greater distress.

"I had it from one who knows him intimately. He is going to be married; but sensible girls don't keep their lovers out too late, and I thought I might find him in; I wish I had, for when I have these turns nothing but opium will help me, and the drug clerks won't give it to me without a doctor's prescription. I must go on."

But the old lady's sympathy as well as curiosity had been aroused. She was a widow and a boarding-house keeper, but she had a heart and was not afraid of showing it.

She therefore stopped him as he hobbled towards the door, and showing him the way into the parlor, asked him to sit down by the fire and warm himself a moment before going out.

"I am sitting up," she exclaimed, "because there are still four or five of my young men out, and as I do not give night-keys to any one but the doctor, I have to sit up, or ask some of my hard-working girls to do so. It is dreary waiting sometimes, but on the whole they are considerate, and I don't complain."

Then as she saw or thought she saw the old gentleman's face grow brighter in the really genial glow of the good hard-coal fire before them, she asked in a hospital tone, if he had ever heard whom the doctor was going to marry.

He shook his grey hairs indifferently, picked out with his glance a coal in the fireplace, and began to study it intently.

"I never paid it any attention," said he. "I am getting too old to busy myself about such matters; and girls are all the same to me, unless it be one girl," he added, with a half-senile, half-pathetic smile, taking from his pocket as he did so a photograph which he looked at fondly.

"Your daughter?" inquired the old lady.

"My grand-daughter," he replied, with enthusiasm.

She leaned over, as women will at the sight of any picture in the hand of another, and quietly looked at it.

"Good heavens!" she exclaimed, "it is Mildred Farley."

"Mildred Farley," he repeated, in mild surprise, "I never heard that name. This is Joanna Handscombe."

"Let me see it," cried she, and Mr. Gryce, greatly pleased at the success of his trick, handed her the picture of Genevieve Gretorex, satisfied that if this good woman continued to find it like the Mildred Farley she had mentioned, he should find that Mildred Farley was the name of the young woman he had himself taken for the original of this picture, and in whose fate, despite his reason and his years, he had found himself so much interested that he had come here at this late hour of the night to learn her name, and if possible, her dwelling-place.

His success surpassed his hopes. The old lady looked at the picture, shook her head, and looked again.

"How these photographs can deceive," cried she. "If I had not stopped to look at this twice, I would have sworn it was Mildred Farley's face, but I see now that she wears her hair quite different, and that she is much better dressed than Mildred could ever hope to be. Nevertheless, there is a very striking similiarity and I should like to see Miss—Miss—"

"Handscombe," put in the detective.

"And Mildred together. It would be a pleasing study." And she stared long and earnestly at the picture, winding up with: "I should like to show it to Mildred."

This was putting herself exactly in the position desired by Mr. Gryce.

"You can do so," he observed, "If you do do not have to carry it far nor keep it long. Does Mildred live anywhere near you? Can you see her to-night?"

Mr. Gryce stroked his trembling right knee with a very loving hand. "One of your boarders," he repeated. "She is doubtless, then, up-stairs asleep."

"No, poor girl, no. She is a dressmaker and sometimes does not close her eyes till 1 o'clock at night. She is not asleep, but come to think of it, she is not in the house at all. She went away for a short vacation a few days ago, and though she promised to be home this afternoon, I believe she did not come. It has always been my hope that Dr. Molesworth would marry her. She is a lovely girl and he is a very fine man. Why, then, shouldn't they come together?"

"And what makes you think they will not? Why shouldn't it be she he is going to marry?"

"Why? Because they would have told me. He knows and she knows there is nothing I wish so much. It would be preposterous for them to keep it to themselves after all I have said. No, if Dr. Molesworth is going to marry any one (and I don't believe yet he is), it must be some ridiculous chit of a girl he has met away from here; and Mildred—why, Lena."

The exclamation was caused by the appearance at the door of a young girl who the moment she saw Mr. Gryce, shrank back and started to run away.

But that emphatic Lena! stopped her, and in a moment the old lady was in the hall; a whispered conference ensued, followed by the re-entrance of the good woman with a note in her hand.

"Well, I never!" she exclaimed, looking first at the letter she held and then at the feeble figure of the old man who had risen with well-feigned indifference as if to go. [illegible] have to say!" And breaking the seal she read the few enclosed lines with a growing wonder that ended in the joyous exclamation of "Good gracious, it is Mildred, after all! He is going to marry her to-night, and bring her home to-morrow. Well, I will give up. Never a word to me about it, and I so fond of them both! I don't understand it, folks are so queer." And she fluttered to and fro in ill-disguised joy, talking and muttering to herself, while Mr. Gryce pulled his muffler about him and began to move slowly towards the door.

"I declare," she broke in, as her attention was recalled to him by this movement, "it does seem a pity for you to go out again into the cold. If you think you would be better here I have an empty room." But at this moment a carriage was heard to stop before the door, and startled into a new train of thought by this unwonted occurrence, she moved towards the front windows, exclaiming, "I do believe they have come now!"

But at her first glance through the curtains, she drew back with a frightened air, and crying, "Oh, what can this mean," and hurried towards the door with every sign of intense agitation.

LIEUTENANT TROUP'S TALE.

The Officer of Stanley's Rear Guard Talks—Bartellot Not to Blame.

BOSTON, Oct. 28.—Lieutenant Troup, one of Stanley's officers, who was left with the unfortunate rear guard under Major Bartellot, is visiting his wife's relatives in Cambridge. A reporter sought from Troup an explanation of Stanley's charges.

"Stanley," he said, "had seen fit to make charges against those whom he had left behind in charge of a forlorn hope, and I will gladly meet anything he may have to represent. Thus far Stanley has made no special charges against Bartellot, and until he does I will respect the man's memory. I will admit certain things were done which I would not have done, but it must be remembered that Bartellot was a quick-tempered man, who had no control over himself, and who was unquestionably the wrong man to be placed in control of the natives, no matter how large a force it might be. The major hated the natives in the first place, and he made no effort to conceal his dislike for them. He never had any experience in the jungle, and did not know how to manage the natives.

"Stanley knew him intimately, and knew just the kind of man he was. If wrong has been done, mind you, I do not say that Stanley's insinuations have any foundation, but if there has been any blunder, Stanley is responsible for having placed such a man in control. As I was saying, Bartellot was hot-tempered. Besides, he had very strict ideas as to military duty of the native soldiers under him. He was a martinet, and exacted from those native soldiers discipline that would have been expected from the flower of the English army.

"Of course such treatment would not do with the natives who had been unaccustomed to restraint, and there was frequent rebellion, which called for disciplinary measures, but I will say I did not see anything done which Stanley has not done. The latter, however, insinuates some very horrible acts were performed. Let him explain himself more fully before I enter into argument with him.

"Then there are incidents in connection with life in camp which have not been told. Yes, I will admit certain measures were carried which I do not care to discuss just now. In a certain sense Stanley has included me in his wholesale criticisms. I prefer to await a definite charge before making any reply. As far as my own position is concerned, I am not ashamed of any accusations. I followed the instructions of my superior in command, and if any mistake is made he is the one responsible."

THE CRY OF MILLIONS.

OH, MY BACK!

STOP IT NOW,

SOON IT WILL BE TOO LATE.

I have been troubled many years with disease of the kidneys and have tried many different remedies and have sought aid from different physicians without relief. About the 15th of April I was suffering from a very violent attack that almost prostrated me in such a manner that I was bent over. When I sat down it was almost impossible for me to get up alone, or to put on my clothes, when kind Providence sent Dr. Henley, with the OREGON KIDNEY TEA, to my hotel. I immediately commenced using the tea. It had an almost miraculous effect, and to the astonishment of all the guests at the hotel, in a few days, I am happy to state, that I was a new man. I will recommend the tea to all afflicted as I have been.

REVELSTOKE RIPPLES.

Happenings in the Mining Region—Good Claims—An Incident.

[From the Kootenay Star.]

The latest assay from Mr. G. S. Topping's claim, at Trail creek, gives $401 to the ton, the proportions being $398 in gold and 3 oz. of silver. In addition the ore carries a fair percentage of copper. Another assay from the same claim gives $210 in gold, in addition to silver and copper. From the claim as says have been made ranging from $40 to $400 to the ton.

The steamboat company are having a roomy and convenient office built at the old steamboat landing. This doubtless means that the steamers will run to it more regularly than they have heretofore done.

Last week was an active one at the smelter. Eigty-six tons of ore were received from various sources, and they were run through the sampling works, assayed by Mr. Roeser, and will be paid for on the basis of their assay value.

At Trail Creek matters are quiet, not much work doing. It is expected not more than 20 or 25 men will winter in the camp, but a big rush is expected in spring. Should the ore pay, there is an unlimited supply.

The Last Chance Co., have extended their tunnel to 1,050 feet, without any change in the prospect. They will continue work through the winter. The Consolation Co., Hunker & Co., had completed their drainage system two weeks ago, and just begun on their pay streak, with first rate prospects. They are all right for work through the winter. The Columbia River Hydraulic Co., at Smith's Creek, are at work as usual, and Sol Holden is there. The above describes all the work at present going on in the Big Bend country. The outlook for next spring depends very much on the success which the Last Chance Co. meets with during the winter.

An innocent couple who could not talk or understand English, presented themselves to the minister, each one in the proud possession of a miner's license. The minister of course had to call a halt on such papers, but having already raised a family the couple were not quite so embarrassed by the situation as younger people would have been. It will be a queer entry in the accounts going down to Victoria with those cancelled mining licenses, "Issued as a marriage license by mistake of officer ——."

He purchased several farms in the neighborhood at high figures, giving notes as payment. He then took possession, and began to dispose of the poultry and stock. He also succeeded in capturing one of Blenheim's fair daughters, and they were married. Yesterday he was arrested on a charge of horse stealing. It turns out that he was C. E. DUEL WITH LARIATS.

Exciting Battle to the Death Between Infuriated Mexican Cowboys.

A novel duel was fought near Moore's station between two Mexican cowboys named Jose Carrasco and Manuel Bosco, says the Louisville Courier-Journal. Carrasco was in possession of a fine mottled cow which Bosco claimed belonged to him and had been stolen some time previous. The two men met in the roadway. They were both on horseback and their lariats hung from the pommels of their saddles. Bosco hailed Carrasco and demanded the return of his cow. The latter became furious at the suggestion that he had come into possession of a stolen cow, and his Mexican blood began to boil. Words of a sulphurous nature began to pass between the cowboys, when Bosco called Carrasco a liar.

Scarcely had the words been spoken when quick as a flash the irate Carrasco grasped his lasso from his saddle, and, twirling it with a quick movement over his head, sent it with a swish toward Bosco's neck. The latter ducked his head and grabbed his lariat as he did so.

Then began one of the fiercest bloodless battles that has ever been recorded. Up and down the roadway the two horsemen dashed, the lassoes of the duellists flying and circling in the air. Not a word was spoken. As fast as the lassoes fell short of their mark they were jerked quickly together, and with a twirl over the head each cowboy endeavored to encircle the other's neck.

The horses were flecked with foam, and both of them dashed away in the same direction, seeming to realize the fight to the death going on between the riders. On sped the horses, but not a word spoke the fighters. Bosco finally turned his eyes from the other cowboy for an instant, and, quick as a flash, Carrasco dropped the noose of his lariat over his adversary's neck, swung his pony around with a jerk, and putting spurs to the animal, started off in the opposite direction.

Bosco was jerked from his horse's back so suddenly that his neck was broken, and he was dragged over the ground at full speed for over a mile. The victor disengaged his lariat from his victim's neck and coolly rode into town.

SPORTING NOTES.

Brief Resume of Sporting Matters Here and There.

Hugh McKay has received a handsome racing shell from the east.

A BORN JOCKEY.

Zeos Andre, the 19-year old jockey killed at Belleville racecourse, was one of fifteen children. His tragic death was a severe blow to his family. He was a born jockey. He loved the excitement of the race track. "I tried to persuade him to quit it," said his father, "and did take him away, but I might as well have deprived him of his victuals." Twice previously he narrowly escaped death. He seemed to have determined to quit the pigskin, for half an hour before his death he said to the owner of Eulidia, who intended withdrawing her from the track forever: "This is the last race I shall ever ride in."

JACKSON WANTS TO MEET SLAVIN.

Parson Davies, who had charge of the affairs of Peter Jackson before the latter left for Australia, writes from San Francisco that the article which appeared in a New York paper recently, to the effect that Jackson declined to make a match with Frank Slavin in England, is wholly untrue. "As a matter of fact," he says, "Slavin backed out of two matches with Jackson in Australia. We were willing to make a match with Slavin in England, and Peter is ready to box with him now."

M'LEOD A WINNER AGAIN.

The long expected wrestling match between Dan McLeod, Nanaimo's champion, and J. McInerney, took place in the Irving Hall, San Francisco, on Tuesday night. A private dispatch states that McLeod had won in two straight falls, the time being three hours, but that Dan had broken two of his fingers. This, with the exception of the contest, was a most exciting one, and places Dan in the front rank of wrestlers.

SAVE YOUR EYESIGHT.

Protect and Preserve it While You Can.

The majority of the people of Victoria and surrounding cities are now aware of the present visit of the eminent, scientific optician, Mr. F. D. Seward, of New York City.

They are also aware of his wonderful skill in adapting correct glasses to the eye, which has been proven to the entire satisfaction of all.

The good work is still going on. If your eyesight troubles you in any way, take advantage of the present opportunity to call without delay.

If your eyes need opticial assistance, Mr. Seward will tell you so, and, if not, he will be candid with you and tell you the truth; no charge is made for consultation.

Mr. Seward's office is now corner Yates and Douglas streets, over Cochrane & Munn's drug store.

WHARF AND WAVE.

Jottings of Interest to Marine Men Concisely Compiled.

A floating drydock for Port Townsend is talked of.

The tug Pilot will be in commission again the end of this week.

Fifty-four deep water ships are loading at the Sound ports this week.

The steamer Yosemite will take her regular run to the Mainland next Monday.

The ship Astoria, discharging rails at Westminster, will be relieved of her cargo in three weeks more.

The steamer Remas, 1708 tons register, is due from San Francisco to load lumber for Melbourne, Australia.

The C. P. R. steamer Abyssinia brought over on her last trip 3000 tons of freight, 20 saloon, 6 second class and 110 Chinese passengers.

The Canadian ship Thierva, Capt. Fraser, 1,174 tons, registered at Picton, N.S., is loading lumber at Moodyville. She came to Burrard Inlet from Hong Kong.

A petition addressed to the United States lighthouse commissioners is being circulated among the pilots and masters of Puget Sound for the establishment on Allyn Island, Rosario Straits, of a steam whistle.

Several complaints have been made of the inadequate wharfage accommodation at Vancouver. Vessels have to lie for unloading very inconveniently two and three abreast. This renders cargo handling expensive and acts as a deterrent to ship owners.

RULED OFF THE TRACK.

Baldwin, Rennox and Johnston Disqualified From the Victoria Course.

The Jockey Club met last evening and transacted considerable business in connection with the year just closed. Mr. R. P. Rithet, president, was in the chair, and there was a large attendance.

A. N. Munsie, having resigned the position of care taker of the track, Harry Stone was appointed. Mr. Stone will make every effort to have a good track for the Spring meeting.

A motion was made and passed that parties making race matches shall deposit $25, or ten per cent of the stakes as a guarantee of good faith both with the club and the public.

Considerable regret was expressed at Mr. E. W. Matthews' resignation of the secretaryship, but he explained that his business called for his undivided attention. The recommendation of his successor was left with the finance committee.

The question of Mr. Mason's protest against Maude C. in the 2:50 class was considered. The circumstances of the case are still fresh, and it will be remembered that the judge's refused to entertain Mason's protest. The executive last evening upheld the decision of the judges and disallowed Mason's contention.

Baldwin, Rennox and Johnstone, who figured in the court recently, were ruled off the course for life.

The spring meeting will be held on May 1st, and it was decided to have the fall meeting in August.

The financial condition of the club was found to be excellent, notwithstanding the bad weather experienced at the last meeting.

York Farm, Moosomin, N.W.T.

Writing from this fertile district, Mr. G. F. Clarke says: "I had a severe attack of diarrhoea, but was quickly cured by using Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry."

ENGINES HALF HUMAN.

Some of the Superstitions of Locomotive Engineers.

Some Carry Cats in the Cab for Good Luck and Others Do Not Care to Start on a Run on Friday—Presentiments of Accidents.

A great many tales have been told about railroad engineers and the queer notions they have about their "pets," as they call them. Some of these stories are pure fiction. The Sunday Democrat correspondent resolved to interview a number of railroad engineers in view of securing their experiences with locomotives, and to find out, if possible, whether engineers, as a rule, are superstitious.

Creston is quite a railroad town, and is the end of a division. It is no trick at all to meet a half dozen railroad engineers, and as they are all good fellows, an interview is cheerfully granted.

Tom H—— is one of the oldest and most reliable engineers on the C., B. & Q. railroad. Being asked concerning locomotives and their engineers, he said:

"A locomotive engine is, to my mind, as near human as any inanimate object can be. Sometimes I think that they are more than half human. Of course that's all fancy, though. I have driven this engine, No. 483, for ten or fifteen years, and I know every inch of her, and know how to manage the old lady. Some days she gets cross and doesn't seem to care about working. Then I have got to coax her. Other days she'll feel bad and take on at a dreadful rate; then I've got to doctor her carefully. We fellows have a way of tending to these little matters. As a general rule my engine is in good trim and goes like a bird. She acts like a human, trembling with excitement if there is a prospect for fast running.

"Do I believe in presentiments? Well, I'll have to say yes. The night we went into a ditch near Malvern, smashing up things badly, I told Jim (the fireman) a half hour before the accident happened that something was coming, because I never before knew the engine to act so queer. She didn't want to go, and when I crowded her she pounded badly, seeming to drag like, along the rails. When the poor girl toppled over on her back in the ditch I thought she groaned awfully. I believe an engine smells danger ahead, somehow, and then goes to tremblin' and pounding. Leastwise mine always did."

"Ever see any ghosts?"

"Well, can't say that I ever did but once. We were coming west from Ottumwa about midnight. It was moonlight, and I could see ahead pretty well. We were nearing a place where a young girl had been killed while crossing the track on a little pony. As we came up rapidly I noticed something white on the track in front, and presently, to my horror and astonishment, I saw the shadowy outline of a young girl. She was holding a little pony by the bridle rein, and the animal was prancing with fright. Both were square on the track. I blew the whistle and turned on the air. At this moment the girl turned her face toward the engine. A long, cruel red scar extended from her forehead to the chin. Her eyes had a pitiful look. But we couldn't have stopped the train for our lives. We dashed upon them and—went through the apparition like it was a cloud of mist. I felt a chilly sensation as we passed, and my blouse was damp, as if dew had fallen upon it. That was the only apparition I ever saw. Poor W—— ran over the girl, and has never ceased to grieve about it."

It is almost amusing to note the myriad of queer fancies that engineers have about certain things. Yet, as far as known, these fancies do not debar them from being brave and trustworthy men. While they may have many a superstitious fear that an accident is impending, it does not unnerve them, and is more likely to keep them on a sharper lookout. Many an engineer believes that his fate is only a question of time, while others believe themselves to be insured against accidents.

It is said that the engineer on one of the express trains that telescoped between Creston and Ottumwa some years ago, when so many passengers were killed, had vague forebodings of impending disaster for several days. It was a feeling that he could not shake off. His intuition proved correct, and, through the blunder of an operator, a horrible accident happened.

Baby Buggies, the finest and largest assortment in the city at low prices, from $9.50 up, at J. Sehl's 66 Government street.

Stolen Fruit Tastes Best.

Outside the closed doors of a barber's shop which I passed on my way to church yesterday forenoon there stood a young man, neat in dress and of pleasing appearance, who scanned each passer with a glance in which there seemed to be something of professional criticism, says a writer in the Boston Post. If his survey appeared to be satisfactory he addressed a few words to the person and there was a short colloquy. As I drew nearer I heard his remark to an unkempt wayfarer in front of me; and it was: "Shave, sir? Right in here." And with a pass-key he threw back the latch of the locked door and waved the customer inside, closing the door with care and politeness after him. The half secrecy of the proceeding doubtless added to the attractiveness of the offer of unlawful service to those in need of it.

WESTMINSTER ELECTION

THE FOUR CANDIDATES ADDRESS THE ELECTORS.

Meeting at Port Moody, Agassiz, and Chilliwhack — Captain Thompson a Government Man—Greer an Opponent —Others Independent.

From our own Correspondent.]

This meeting was held on Friday at [illegible] secretary. There were 17 persons present.

Mr. Scott, in opening the meeting, said that all four candidates seemed to be of one political stripe.

Mr. Greer was called upon to open the bawl in this campaign. He spoke about the Hon. John Robson's betraying the confidence of the electors of the district, and stated that if he should again appear before them, dressed in the garb of the Angel Gabriel, the electors would doubt his conversion. He also defined a statesman as one who could sit still and smile whilst his opponents were burning him up. He made out that he was the only Opposition candidate, and that Messrs. Ladner and Thompson were for the Government, and Mr. Sword was what could not be defined—an independent. He accused Mr. Ladner of having told Mr. Punch at the late election, that if he would promise to support the Government Ladner would give him all his influence at Ladner's Landing. He took his seat amidst applause.

Mr. Ladner was next called upon. The burden of his speech was that he had been unable to do anything for the district; but he hoped to do better in future, if elected. He also stated that hereafter he was going to support measures not men. He denied Mr. Greer's statement about what he said to Mr. Punch, and stated that he had advised Mr. Punch to come out as an Independent.

Mr. Sword then in a few well chosen words, defined his position, and that as he had been so lately before them he still intended to stand by his utterances on the late canvass, and sat down amidst applause.

Mr. Thompson eulogised Messrs. Robson and Vernon, and intended to stand by that part of the present administration. He then stated that the land policy of the Government had been in every way detrimental to the advancement of the Province, but the Government was now going to do right with the lands. He also stated that the members from the upper country were practically in the hands of the Victoria people.

The next meeting was held at Agassiz station. Twenty-one persons were addressed here. Mr. McDonald was chairman.

Mr. Ladner was first called upon and made practically the same remarks as at Port Moody, taking his address as published in Truth as a basis. He also took up Mr. Muir's circular and endeavored to refute his statements.

Mr. Sword here also only made a short speech, defining his position to be that of the two members elect, and the same as he had advocated at the late election. His remarks were received with applause.

Mr. Thompson practically repeated his Port Moody speech, explaining his dyking scheme, that the government should guarantee the interest on the bonds, taking the land as security.

Mr. Greer, then attacked the other three candidates as having no policy, and that his was to defeat the Hon. John Robson's government forthwith, not waiting until the census was taken, and in a well received address hauled the actions of the Government over the coals, apparently to the entire satisfaction and relish of the audience who frequently applauded his remarks.

Mr. Muir was then called for and in a few words completely demolished the attempt of Mr. Ladner to free himself from the responsibility of his action on the school committee which Mr. Muir had exposed in his circular.

The next meeting was appointed for Chilliwhack Center at 11 a. m. Saturday, but on arriving at the place, a notice was found intimating that all had gone to Centerville for the meeting at 2 p.m. Here a large number were assembled. A Mr. Davison was here chosen as chairman and about 3 p. m. called upon Mr. Sword to commence.

Here Mr. Sword again states that his position and policy is still the same as announced at the late election. He also stated that although he had little or no respect for the Hon. John Robson, still less for his attorney-general, yet if he found them bringing in good measures for the district, he would support those measures, and not allow his personal dislike to them to interfere with the discharge of his duty to his constituents. The only pledge he intended to give was that as he was well and long known to them he would do his best for the district and the Province. He retired amidst applause

Mr. Thompson was the next to address the meeting. He defined his position as an independent supporter of the government; that as Mr. Robson was the best statesman, it was right to stick to him. He then stated that Victoria runs the country; a ring in Victoria virtually controlled the government of the country. Everything points to the formation of a new party with Robson and Vernon in it. He would curtail the amount of land to actual settlers to 80 acres each., a wild land tax of 25 cents per acre; that wild land be taxed the same as improved lands adjoining (applause). He here stated that a Mr. Brady had consented that money voted by the Provincial government for the roads in the district should be spent in making a road from the rear through Mr. Brady's land to the front (your correspondent wonders who Mr. Brady is, and if the Hon. Jon Robson is the man to whom he gave his consent), and he wound up by promising if elected, that he would try to get more of the public funds for the district than it was entitled to. (How is that for a captain.)

Mr. Greer made one of his telling speeches amid rounds of applause. He also stated that his home and interests were in Chilliwhack? (What will Vancouver think of this.

Mr. Ladner was the last speaker, and his rising seemed to frighten the audience, as about one half of the meeting left, and at the end of his remarks the hall was almost empty. His attacking Mr. Beaven, his former leader (who had no chance to reply) was generally condemned. Mr. Ladner attempted to refute the statements mentioned in Mr. Muir's circular, but got so completely mixed up, gave up in despair.

The meeting was then closed by votes of thanks to the chairman and to Messrs. Martin for the use of their hall.

It seems quite evident that the election of Mr. Sword is a foregone conclusion. It is a great pity that Mr. Greer ever entered the field, as the only effect it can possibly have is to divert a few of the votes from Mr. Sword, and thus reduce his majority. Mr. Ladner's second defeat is admitted even by his friends, and Robson's candidature seems to be a blunt to take a few of the independent votes from Mr. Sword, in the vain effort to turn the tide in favor of Mr. Ladner. The 7th of November will tell the tale.

It was Mr. Emerson who said "the first health is wealth," and it was a wiser than the modern philosopher who said that "the blood is the life." The system, like the clock, runs down. It needs winding up. The blood gets poor and scores of diseases result. It needs a tonic to enrich it.

A certain wise doctor, after years of patient study, discovered a medicine which purified the blood, gave tone to the system, and made men—tired, nervous, brain-wasting men—feel like new. He called it "his Golden Medical Discovery." It has been sold for years, sold by the million of bottles, and people found such satisfaction in it that Dr. Pierce, who discovered it, now feels warranted in selling it under a positive guarantee of its doing good in all cases

Perhaps it's the medicine for you. Your's wouldn't be the first case of scrofula or salt-rheum, skin disease, or lung disease, it has cured when nothing else would. The trial's worth making, and costs nothing. Money refunded if don't do you good.

CITY AND PROVINCIAL.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Considerable Business Done at Last Night's Meeting—Civic Affairs.

The full board of aldermen with the exception of Ald. Vigelius, gathered at the City Hall last night, with Mayor Grant in the chair. Roll being complete, Clerk Dowler read the following

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Crane, McGregor & Boggs in re extension of water mains on the Cadboro Bay road outside the city limits.—Filed, matter being under consideration.

From R. Finlayson calling attention to bad drain on Wharf street.—Referred to committee.

From John Irving asking for a four inch service pipe for the C. P. N. Co.'s use.—Referred to committee.

From H. Waller asking permission to plant shade trees.—Granted.

From the park commissioners asking that certain lots be purchased to extend Vancouver street so that it will lead direct to the park.—Referred to committee.

From W. C. Brown complaining of bad state of drain near his property.—Referred to committee.

From John Silvia complaining of disorderly conduct of Chinese occupying a wash house near the corner of Johnson and Store streets.—Referred to committee.

From George Amorsen in re drainage of Stanley avenue, and asking that something be done.—Referred to committee.

From C. H. S.—Communication being anonymous, no notice was taken of it.

From J. P. Walls for J. Phœnix, complaining that Henry street, adjoining his lots, had been raised eight feet above the level of the lots, and asking that the street be either reduced to its proper grade, or compensation.—Ald. Holland could state that complainant did not own the lots when the street was graded, and the communication was filed.

From the Pacific Asphalt Co., asking for a few yards of rock, for which they will pay.—Referred to committee.

From John Blaine, re bad drainage on Hill street.—Referred to committee.

From the Goodrich Rubber Co., giving list of articles and prices on sale.—Referred to the mayor.

From D. R. Harris, re right of way for sewerage purposes.—Referred to committee.

From W. S. Gore, surveyor-general, re widening of Chatham street, and stating the government would give ten feet of land.—Referred to committee.

PETITIONS.

From residents of Discovery street, asking that the street be put in better order.—Referred to committee.

DELUGE FIRE HALL.

On motion the tenders for the purchase of the Deluge fire hall and property were opened. They were as follows: Hall, Goepel & Co., $9,100; J. J. Austin, $13,250; Henry Mansell, $12,250.75; B. C. Land Investment Co., $15,500; S. J. Pitts, $12,333.—Referred to the fire wardens for report.

REPORTS.

From the street committee reporting Rock Bay bridge and its draw is not safe for traffic, and recommending that repairs be done.—Ald. Harrison showed that the work could be done for about $1000, and he strongly advised that the work be done at once before any accident occurred.

Ald. McKillican thought if the draw was not opened no danger would arise, and he believed the matter might be held over for a time.

Ald. Harrison thought the street car company should not be put to an inconvenience on account of a weak bridge. The company was not to blame for the present state of affairs, and the bridge should be made strong.

Ald. Smith contended, as he did some time ago, that the bridge at present was not strong enough to carry the street cars.

Ald. Kelly thought there would be no good in mending the bridge unless a good foundation was first made.

Ald. Robertson coincided.

On motion the report was adopted, the expenditure not to exceed $1000.

From the fire wardens and electric light committee reporting that Engineer Foster had, on Tuesday night, when the wires were crossed, used uncalled for and unbecoming language to Chief Deasy. Also that orders be given that in case of danger from crossed wires the electric light machines should be stopped at once.—Adopted.

From the police committee as follows:

"Your police committee having investigated the question respecting the arrest of Mr. Giscombe by Constable Levin, on Government street a short time ago, find: That Mr. Giscombe was on the sidewalk when the arrest was made; when Mr. Giscombe was told to move on by Constable Levin, he (Giscome) was standing on the edge of the sidewalk, from which place he moved back to the inside of the side sidewalk, with his back against the wall of the building. We are of opinion that Mr. Giscome thought when he occupied that position that he was on the sidewalk, and are convinced that both parties were excited. According to the statements of witnesses, Constable Levin treated Mr. Giscome rather roughly, he being an old citizen of 31 years, a man noted for his quietness and for having conducted himself during all that period in a straightforward and upright manner. He should have had some consideration shown him by officer Levin. The usual course in cases of this nature is to take out a summons against the offender, and not arrest and lock him up till next day. All constables should use a little discretion in cases of this kind, more especially where respectable citizens are concerned; we reccommend that your honorable body instruct your committee to inform the Chief of Police accordingly. At the next meeting of the council your committee will present certain rules and regulations for the guidance of constables, also to give the Chief of Police more power. We have the honor to be gentleman,

Yours etc.,
A. J. SMITH,
J. HLLAND, } Committee.
S. L. KELLY,

From the fire wardens, asking further time to consider question of supply of certain goods.

NOTICE OF MOTION.

A notice of resolution was made by Ald. Harrison, to the effect that cattle, sheep or swine be not allowed to cross the city bridges.

PARTIES IN ARREARS.

Ald. Smith submitted a resolution that all parties in arrears three months for water should have the supply shut off.—Carried.

AMENDMENT.

A technical amendment to the extension of the city limits by-law was ordered made.

FINANCE.

The Mayor drew attention to the fact that it would be to the interest of the city to consolidate several small loans, as by so doing a considerable sum could be saved thereby, and advised the finance committee to take the same under consideration.

The meeting then adjourned.

Among the Sealers.

Although the sealers are laid up for the winter the crews of most of them are being kept busily at work, painting, scraping and cleaning them up, preparatory for next season's work. The majority of them have already been painted and look quite bright lying in the upper harbor with bare poles. Several are waiting to go on the ways, some for new masts and all of them are having something done to them.

Closed for the Winter.

The juvenile department of the Topaz avenue establishment is closed for the winter and the services of the attendants dispensed with, while the late occupants are spending an indefinite portion of the season in passing through the rising cities of Puget Sound. Their object, as the papers say, is purely one pleasure, but they are storing up a fund of valuable information which will be of immense service to them in after life.

Raising the Curriculum.

A correspondent of the TIMES, resident in Ottawa, writes us that the following story is current about our "Minister of Education," so-called. While visiting a school, presumably in New Westminster, district, the minister was told by the teacher that the standard of the curriculum was not as high as it should be. "Indeed," replied Mr. Robson. "That must be rectified, I'll see that a carpenter is sent round to have it raised at once."

Died in the Cells.

Jeremiah Pickhard died early this morning, the belief being that he was of unsound mind. His conduct confirmed this impression and a close watch was maintained till shortly after midnight he was found in the struggles of a fit. Dr. Milne was immediately summoned to the scene, but Pickard was dead before assistance arrived, which was in a very short space of time. Deceased was only 30 years of age. On further examination this morning, Dr. Milne concluded that an inquest was not necessary, and the remains were accordingly interred to-day. Deceased is a native of New Brunswick and was a carriage builder by trade.

Some of Victoria's Wants.

The Islander was freighted with two days' cargo last night. In provisions she brought over 11 bags of coffee; 18 packages of tea; 30 tubs of butter; 41 cases of eggs; 60 barrels of whiskey in bond for Turner, Beeton & Co; 125 cases of brandy and whiskey for the Hudson Bay Co; 22 cases of whiskey for A. B. Gray & Co; 36 cases brandy, whiskey and gin for Fell & Co.; 33 cases for H. Saunders; 23 cases gin and brandy for J. Wrigglesworth; 50 cases whiskey for R. P. Rithet & Co.; 43 cases brandy for Tolmie & Stewart; 77 cases brandy, whiskey and gin for Samuel Clay; 25 cases brandy and whiskey for Harrison & McAllister; and 12 cases champagne for L. Marboeuf.

Rev. Jos. Cook.

The ladies of the W. C. T. U. and the I. O. G. T. have met with splendid success in their sale of tickets for the lecture to be given by Rev. Joseph Cook at the Victoria theatre to-morrow night, and a crowded house is assured. Mr. Cook hardly needs any puffing, his abilities as an orator being well known, and the subject, "Law and Labor, Property and Poverty," will without a shadow of doubt be dealt with in a manner pleasing and instructive. Rev. Dr. Thos. Hill, ex-president of Harvard, says of Mr. Cook's lectures: "These lectures are crowded so full of knowledge, of thought, of argument, illumined with such passages of eloquence and power, spiced so frequently with deep-cutting though good-natured irony, that I could make no abstract from them, without utterly mutilating them."

Experientia Docet!!

Sometimes a street car gets what is termed "grounded," and then it is not safe for a man unacquainted with the freaks of electricity to meddle with that car. One of the cars was grounded Tuesday evening and until the current was shut off, the entire car was charged with the chained lightning material. A young gentleman who is fond of being an amateur motorneer undertook to set matters right, and ordered the current on till he saw "what was the matter." He placed his hands on the driving crank and break with the firm grip of a man determined to put everything straight and send the people on their way his everlasting debtors. The current was turned on and—"Oh-h-h!" came a strange terrified voice. The owner was too attached to those handles to let go, and it was only by the cessation of the electric current that he was induced to release them. If the man who stepped off that car did not know something more of the science of electricity than when he got on, he certainly had a greater knowledge of its power.

AN ACCESSIBLE PORT.

In Spite of Fog, Steamers Can Enter Victoria Harbor.

The last few foggy days experience goes to prove one very important fact, and that is that as a seaport Victoria stands far ahead of any of her rivals. In spite of the fog, all steamers bound in here from the southern coast or from Sound ports, have arrived on time. The man-of-war Espiegle, with Admiral Hotham on board, has been two days on her way from Vancouver, and is yet to be heard from. The steamer Princess Louise was two days delayed, the steamer Rainbow was likewise fog bound up in the Gulf of Georgia, but the City of Puebla from 'Frisco, and the City of Kingston, the Olympian and the North Pacific from the American shores, made Victoria all right. The C. P. R. steamer Abyssinia, which passed here on her way to Vancouver, was two days getting to port, being delayed by fog.

This all goes to prove that as a sea port Victoria cannot be overated. Her position is such that a steamer captain has a fair chance of making the harbor should his vessel be entering from the sea or Puget Sound, while the course to those cities on the mainland is beset with dangerous rocks and reefs, a menace at all times, but doubly so when the fall like fog is spread over the water. The entrance to Victoria's outer harbor is clear, and masters of boats do not take any very great risk in trying to make port. This fact is a strong one in support of Victoria's claims for precedence from a maritime point of view.

Glass Blowing.

A vacant store has been secured in the Telegraph block for the temporay quarters of the Bohemian glass blowers, who will open on Saturday morning. A larger and more convenient locality will be looked for soon.

Fire in Chinatown.

Shortly after 10 o'clock last night Supt. Sheppard and Officers Levin and McDonald heard a whistle blowing on Fisguard street. They ran to the locality, and found several Chinamen endeavoring to extinguish a fire in a house on the north side of the street, between store and Government streets. The officers assisted the Chinese, and suppressed the fire without turning in an alarm. The fire originated in a defective flue.

A Classified Index.

There will soon be issued in the Daily and Weekly TIMES a carefully classified index of the principal corporations, merchants, manufacturers, financial and professional interest of our city to be circulated through the country. This index will offer unusual inducements to business and professional men to widely represent their interests. An agent will call and explain the nature of the enterprise which should have the support of all.

The Secret Burned.

Four convicts and one keeper of convicts are sufficient to destroy by fire the records of public school examinations of a city like Victoria. It is not hard work, but it takes the five men all day to burn the thoughts of children committed to paper. Now the secret of making those promotions, about which there was such feeling manifested, will never be known, save by the great powers who ruled all things in connection with the schools.

A Sailor's Bride.

A letter has seached here from Maitland, N.S., which states that a well-known and popular sealing schooner captain, who left here several weeks ago to purchase a schooner, has in addition to that buiness, which was successfully consummated, taken unto himself a bride, a lovely young lady of Maitland, who will take her honeymoon trip on the schooner out around Cape Horn with her husband.

A Popular Captain.

Capt. Jas. Hunter who resigned the command of the steamer Elder when she was docked at Esquimalt several weeks ago has been appointed to the Yaquina, which boat goes on the Alaska route Nov. 17th. During Capt. Hunter's trips to Alaska on the Elder he won the respect of the people in that territory, and became very popular among them. As a token of their regard for him the people of Alaska decided to present the captain with a handsome tea set costing $600, and consequently a lady of Alaska went to San Francisco to present it to him.

Looks Like Succeeding.

The fruit and sardine cannery to be established in Victoria, is now almost on a practical basis, in as much as the greater portion of the stock, about $35,000, has been subscribed for. Plans of buildings and machinery are under consideration and will be decided on in the course of a week or so. Messrs. Crane, McGregor & Boggs have met with much encouragement in the floating of this enterprise, the success of which indicates the commencement of an important and paying industry in this city. The site has not yet been selected, but it is presumed that the location will be on the water front of the upper harbor.

No Foreign Clearance.

It appears that the ports of Tacoma and Seattle, which are sub-ports, come under the same rule as does Port Angeleles regarding clearances for foreign vessels. As the law stands, all foreign bottoms loading at any of those port Townsend. At first it was understood that the reason British vessels could not clear at Port Angeles was on account of there being no British consul there, but later advices show that were such an official a resident, the United States law would still be enforced, and Port Townsend would still be the final clearing port, as it is now. Just what good has been made by the making of these cities sub-ports is hard to see, save and except it confers more privilegs on American vessels. It does not help foreign ones any.

Seriously Ill.

Paris Carter, the well known colored expressman, is very ill. The relatives of Mr. Carter considered it advisable to send him in the country where it is hoped he will recover from the serious attack of illness.

An Enjoyable Dance.

The dance given by the Warspite band last evening in Blue Ribbon hall, Esquimalt, was a very enjoyable affair and afforded many couples an opportunity of tripping the light fantastic toe for a few hours, during which, dull care was banished, not to the winds, but to the fog.

Put in Order.

The Mayor's room at the city hall is now in the hands of the decorators, under the direction of Mr. Northcott, building inspector, and is being fixed up very neatly and comfortably. It will be very creditable to the city, and will be a suitable place for the chief magistrate to receive those who may have business with him.

Scotsmen on Pleasure Bent.

Once before this season the walls of the Sir William Wallace Society have resounded with gaiety and merriment such as only the hearty Scotsman can enter into. They will assemble in the same place to-morrow night for the same purpose, and the preparations that have been made go to show that this purpose will be realized to the fullest extent.

A Visiting Knight.

Mr. J. Costello, member of the General Executive Board of the Knights of Labor, arrived in Nanaimo yesterday morning. The gentleman has travelled through nearly all the mining camps in America in the interest of the United Mine Workers of America and Knights of Labor combined. His errand, says the Free Press, is to address the various meetings of miners for the purpose of uniting them together and assisting each other in any case of emergency. Mr. Costello addressed the locked out miners of Wellington yesterday and took part in the procession.

Delayed Steamers.

The fog was very thick in the Gulf this morning and consequently steamers for the Mainland did not venture out until it had cleared up a little. The steamers Princess Louise and Islander did not leave until noon as they will very likely get through the passes before the fog again sets in. The North Pacific left as usual for the Sound, she not having the fog among the islands to contend with. The Rainbow, due on Sunday, did not arrive until last night and it is expected now that she will not go out again until next Tuesday. The Rithet has not yet shown up from Westminster.

Horticultural.

This office is the recipient of a box of fruit, apples and peaches, at the hands of Mr. T. G. Earle, of Lytton. The samples are especially fine, both in respect to size and flavor, and amply bear out the oft made statement of the TIMES, that the interior is capable of producing certain lines of fruit equal to the best that can be raised in California and Oregon. With this possibility before us, as well as development in other lines of agricultural products, contingent only on irrigation, no pains or expense should be spared to effect a solution of the problem of how to get water. Mr. Earle is to be congratulated in his success as an horticulturist under the unfavorable conditions at present existing.

Put in Order.

"Tit Bits," that wonderful production of London journalism, is laid before its readers with a double face now. One edition comes out in the ordinary type, while another completely separate issue is made in Isaac Pitman's short hand. This enterprise will attach to the paper a very important community in England and even the colonies. To judge by the first number would be unfair, although even a very fastidious shorthand writer could find but little fault with it. Still there's room for improvement in many details.
